Background: Patients with multiple system atrophy (MSA) have cardiac dysfunction. The aim of the study was to evaluate left ventricular (LV) systolic and diastolic function in patients with MSA using conventional and tissue Doppler echocardiography. Methods: Conventional and Doppler echocardiography examinations were performed in 15 MSA patients (11 men, mean age 54 ± 6.6 years) and 15 age-matched healthy subjects (11 men, mean age 53 ± 6.1 years). Echocardiographic examinations and Doppler recordings were performed with patients in a supine position. Left ventricular tissue Doppler imaging (TDI) was used for systolic and diastolic function assessment in all subjects. Left ventricular ejection fraction (LVEF) was calculated using modified Simpson's method. Aortic, LV and mitral Doppler velocities were recorded. All measurements were repeated after ≥ 5 min rest. Intra- and inter-observer variability were assessed in 10 patients and 5 controls. Results: LVEF was lower in MSA patients than controls ($25.5 \pm 5.2\%$ vs. $52.1 \pm 4.1\%$; $p < 0.001$). Q: Java do-while loop exit condition failed // input.txt 1 2 3 // program import java.io.BufferedReader; import java

What's New in the?

Q: Why is it said that with fractional-order differential equations, the initial conditions are not fully determined by initial conditions on $t = 0$? I was just reading about fractional derivatives and fractional differential equations. In the latter, if you have an initial condition on $t = 0$ of a function $f(t)$ then, after applying the derivative, the result can be expressed in the form $f(t) = g(t) h(t)$ where $h(t)$ is also an arbitrary function. Why is it that fractional differential equations give rise to more degrees of freedom in the initial conditions than fractional order differential equations? A: You're right, at the outset, that, as with differential equations in general, the solutions to fractional differential equations are not fully determined by initial conditions. That is, a solution to a fractional differential equation, even with initial conditions, can take on an enormous range of forms, and, furthermore, if it is solvable at all, it will be solvable with very singular or even ill-defined "initial conditions". However, the loss of information is not random, and can be used to construct a solution where the general form of the solution is known. For instance, the solution to $$\frac{d^\alpha x}{dt^\alpha} + a(t) \frac{d^\alpha x}{dt^\alpha} = b(t)$$

 is $$x(t) = e^{-\int_0^t a(t') dt'} \int_0^t e^{-\int_0^{t-s} a(t') dt'} b(s) ds,$$ where the fractional integral is defined by $$\int_0^t a(t') dt' = \sum_{k=0}^{\infty} a^{(k+1)} \frac{t^k}{k!}.$$
 In this case, $x(0) = \int_0^0 a(t')$
